

MEET THE PIANO AND KEYBOARD!

Piano

Find out more

The piano is an acoustic stringed instrument; the strings are struck by hammers as the keys are pressed. The piano is usually played as a solo instrument, and composers through the ages have embraced its versatility and range. It is also used as an accompanying instrument, so pianists are always in demand! Learning the Piano is a great way to develop coordination, memory and concentration. Children can learn to play from an early age. A keyboard is an inexpensive introductory instrument and allows students to play in a band. A piano is more nuanced and versatile.

Have a listen!

Keyboard

Find out more

The keyboard is an electronic instrument, most often played in a group or band. It can also recreate the sound of a piano to an extent, and so can be suitable for beginner pianists to learn on. Learning the Keyboard is a great way to develop coordination, memory and concentration. Children can learn to play from an early age.

Have a listen!

